

HUERTA FAILED TO SAIL WITH FRIENDS

REST OF CABINET SAILED FROM VERA CRUZ WITHOUT PRESIDENT.

FEDERALS SURRENDER

Western Coast of Mexico is Scene of Great Many Federal Disasters.

Washington, July 14.—General Huerta was not among the high officials of the Mexican refugees sailing from Vera Cruz to the United States, according to dispatches today from General Huerta. The holding of the general and the hurried repairs of the railway to Mexico City had been taken as an indication that the dictator was about to flee the country.

At Santa Rosalia, a mining port on the Pacific coast, the federal forces held a conference yesterday at which it was decided to bury the hatchet and make joint cause against Carranza. The place at La Paz, another lower California port, the federal commander, General Salazar, reported that he had been forced to make daily levies of cash and rations to support his small garrison.

Both federal and constitutionalist generals at Guaymas express profound thanks to the American commander there for his assistance in negotiating the armistice.

In the meantime, four large merchant vessels of the Nevarera (Mexican) line are loading rapidly and are expected to sail for the United States. Negotiations for the exchange of prisoners began with the signing of the armistice.

Hinkenshawer made an automobile tour of Connecticut taking a "silver quarter" subscription to finance Mrs. Wakefield's second fight for life. Charles W. Bauby of Waterbury, Conn., will be attorney for the defendant.

EMPLOYERS SHOULD GIVE GIRLS CHANCE

Managers of Employment Agencies Testify at Wisconsin Vice Commission Session This Morning.

Milwaukee, July 14.—Managers of employment agencies supplying help today testified at the Wisconsin vice commission session this morning.

NO CHARGES AGAINST SIR THOMAS LIPTON

British Attorney General Finds No Evidence in Army Scandal Against Head of Company.

London, July 14.—The attorney general decided today there was no evidence before him to justify the criminal prosecution of Sir Thomas Lipton in connection with the recent army canteen scandals for which several army officers and employees of the Lipton company were convicted.

Replying to a question by Sir Arthur Markham in the house of commons, the attorney general said proceedings had already been taken in regard to those against whom evidence existed. No such evidence, however, existed against Sir Thomas Lipton.

TO SUBMIT RECORDS TO A SPECIAL JURY

Government Attorneys Plan to Show Grand Jury Today Paper of Transactions of La Salle Bank.

Chicago, July 14.—Government attorneys planned to show to a special grand jury today records of transactions of the La Salle Street bank while it was a national institution.

The records, which are called "the La Salle records," were taken from the bank's books by the Chicago police and the Litchfield Mill and Elevator company and the Southern Traction company.

Investigations of the bank's affairs by the federal grand jury were blocked temporarily today because Hiram Kadish, a government accountant, declined to reveal to it evidence he has obtained in the federal investigation.

INGRAM CONFIDENT OF DAHL VICTORY

"Republican Candidate is for Better Government," Declares Former Speaker of Assembly.

Madison, Wis., July 14.—That the official record of A. H. Dahl of Vernon county, republican candidate for governor, shows he is well qualified to solve problems confronting the state today is the gist of a statement made public here today by Charles A. Ingram, speaker of the assembly.

Following is the statement issued by Ingram today: "The candidacy of Andrew H. Dahl for the republican nomination for governor is timely. Wisconsin is progressive and republican. But there is a justifiable protest against recent extravagant appropriations. No one who has been or is intimately connected with such extravagance will do as a candidate for governor. The state is in a financial straits and economy may be. The republican candidate must be known by his works—his record must be his platform."

ENGLAND TROUBLED OVER NEW METHODS TO CURB MILITANTS

Fear Public Will Take Law in Own Hands in Dealing With "Wild Woman" in England.

London, July 14.—England is undoubtedly on the verge of lynch law. The increasing seriousness of militant outrages, the confessed inability of Scotland Yard to cope with the "wild woman," the lamentable failure of the Cat and Mouse law, few weeks ago, to curb the lawless few who are bent on the destruction of the British public face to face with the proposition of taking the law into its own hands.

Since McKenna has refused to heed the popular demand of "let them die in prison," those who have watched the growing ugliness of the crowds in the public parks where the suffragettes attempt to hold their meetings are convinced that the time is not far distant when the cry will be taken up of "let them die."

The attitude taken by a number of the police magistrates who have been called upon to try the disturbers, in no case has severe punishment been meted out. In frequent instances the prisoners have been dismissed with a warning—and the warning has been vouchered in such terms as to indicate that the magistrate really didn't mean it to be taken very seriously.

McKenna's belated scheme of trying to put the "Women's Social and Political Union" of business by proceeding in the civil courts against the wealthy and important contributors to its fund is generally regarded as both futile and puerile.

STYLES CHANGE IN a Flash

"Styles change with such sudden flashes these days that it pays to lay in things a few at a time," said a wise woman.

With fashion fluttering from one extreme to the other, it keeps one busy to be up to date. The safest guide to fashion's kaleidoscope are the advertising columns of The Gazette.

SPLIT OVER RACE QUESTION EXPECTED AT CONVENTION

The modern woman finds as much real news and useful information in the advertising columns as she does in any part of the paper.

JOINT SESSION IS URGED BY READ ON ANTI-TRUST BILL

Missouri Senator Prepares Resolution Hoping to Introduce it to Senate Today.

Washington, July 14.—While the senate judiciary and interstate commerce committee continued their labors today to perfect the administration's anti-trust program, efforts were being made for joint sessions of the two committees with a view to consolidating all pending trust legislation.

Senator Read of Missouri is leading the movement for joint sessions. He was expected to offer the resolution in the senate today. Sentiment in favor of the proposal was said today to be growing in favor despite the fact that an effort made by the interstate commerce committee to have the judiciary committee to operate with it, had proven unsuccessful.

The interstate commerce committee also expected to finish its work on the railway securities bill today. The committee apparently, however, is deadlocked on several important features of the bill.

WISCONSIN EUGENIC LAW IS COMMENDED

Chicago, July 14.—"The modern eugenic program makes sense, is feasible and practicable, a certain degree of social advancement," said Dr. F. R. Drake of Waupun before the meeting of the American Neurologists, brought together by the Chicago medical society for discussion of mental diseases.

CALVIN STEWART OF KENOSHA CALLS DEMOCRATIC BATH-ING TO ORDER.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 14.—West Side Turner Hall Democratic Convention—If the democratic leaders who have been busy in Milwaukee for the past two days finally hoped to bring about a peaceful solution of the democratic entanglement they met their final Waterloo this morning when it was officially announced that John A. Aylward of Madison, until the past few days an aspirant for the job of United States senator, had withdrawn from that contest and announced his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination and that Paul Hastings of Mayville has announced his candidacy for the United States senate.

AYLWARD IN THE RACE

Now Aspires to Be Nominated for Governor—Hustling Out for Senate—Factional Defiances Not Heeded.

With the Karel-Kearney democrats in control of the state gathering of democrats this means war for the bitter end with Karel and Kearney. Aylward-Hustling democrats, however, it was a clean cut fight between Karel and Aylward, and will be fought out on those lines throughout the remainder of the campaign. Karel refused to drop out of the race and all Aylward efforts to bring about a compromise candidate availed nothing, and the war is on.

START CAMPAIGN TO CONTROL HOG CHOLERA

An organized effort to control hog cholera in Wisconsin has started. The Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture has assigned Dr. A. L. Faunce to represent the federal government in its fight against the disease. Dr. Faunce has arrived from Washington and has established headquarters at the College of Agriculture.

Dr. H. L. Russell is the head of the co-operating agencies for the state, which will include the veterinary department of the college and the live stock sanitary board of which Dr. O. H. Eliason is the executive officer. The work is to be entirely co-operative in character, the principal object being to demonstrate to farmers how they may by their own efforts reduce losses from hog cholera. This co-operative work on the part of the government comes as the result of an act passed last winter by congress which provides a fund of $500,000 for a nationwide crusade against the dread disease.

The work will consist of addresses at farmers' meetings, veterinary meetings, commercial clubs, etc., and demonstrations of the methods of vaccination. Particular emphasis will be laid upon keeping premises properly cleaned and disinfected and in enforcing all precautions possible to prevent infection and the spread of disease.

Hog cholera caused a loss in this state of over $1,000,000 during the last year and of about $73,000,000 in the whole United States. It is hoped and expected that all parties interested will give their hearty support and co-operation, for it is only by active co-operation of all concerned that hog cholera can be controlled and eradicated.

TELLS OF FOURTH IN CALIFORNIA CLIMATE

A. W. THORPE WRITES FROM WITCH CREEK, CALIFORNIA.

INTERESTING LETTER

Tells of Wonders of Western Country as He Sees Them While Journeying Through Pacific Slope.

Witch Creek, Cal., July 6.—I am so full of California watermelon, that I can scarcely reach over it, but will try and write some about several little trips we have taken around San Diego.

Won't say much about San Diego itself for all cities are very much the same, but one thing I thought was very strange. If you ride about San Diego you will notice all the fine new bungalows have a large outside chimney spread all over one side of the house. The owner who can build the large and most ill-shaped chimney is the best fellow and they are built of broken brick, rubble stone and all such things and the rougher the better.

Now you might picture the family gathered around a fine large fireplace in which blazes a fire of hickory logs, etc., but its more than likely there will be a small upright stove about the size of a toilet, and the family running through a piece of sheet iron or maybe there will be a sad little gas log, about big enough for a cigar lighter.

People in San Diego buy wood and coal in sacks, like peanuts, in Janesville and at about the same price.

First they build the chimney, then count the money they have left and lean a bungalow against it.

We were anxious to be on the beach soon as possible so went out to Ocean Beach one day. It was cool with a brisk west wind and the big waves were crashing through the air and sand, the ocean looked gray and cold, one man was in bathing and looked very small bobbing up and down in the waves.

Then another day we went out to the beach at Coronado. It was just a grand day and the ocean was like glass or seemed to be way out but along near shore the water would heave up into long rollers that broke on the sand in showers of white spray.

The world and his girl as well as his grandmother were wading along the beach in the summer sea and all looking like nothing but a bunch of little crabs under the rock that would dance around, wave their claws and dare you to fight, then run off backwards.

We found a small devil fish under the wharf which looked like a mass of snakes tied together in the middle. Did not bother it long for it was a hard looking customer. It was a very delightful day and should like to go again.

We visited a Japanese tea garden, which is like something for babies. I know I felt like a cat in a barrel. The body is made to open the wooden gate at the entrance by striking a gong with a stick of wood whereupon an old Jap in American clothes let us in but not before we paid him twenty-five cents each, then we walked along little paths, then a little lake with a little house built out of fish poles. Then the old Jap uttered some noise through the air and a Jap lady came trotting down a path. She was twisted up in a gown of most wonderful hue, with a pair of pump, brown legs hanging down below. She hustled around in the corner and served us some tea in a thimble and some buttons for crackers. We grazed far across the lake to the deer feeding on the hills, (the lake was about three by six feet and the deer were little iron ones). The old Jap tried to amuse us by playing on the grass with a small baby, but the baby came rather its gown parted company and it began to shed laundry so the old Jap picked up the fragments and hustled away.

One of our aunts asked the Jap lady the name of some strange looking flowers and she said something that sounded like "fisho fisho."

We went through the big hotel and I found some large paintings that hung in front of them so long that I could not see the other side. The pictures were by Frederick Remington and pictured a man and his horse way off in the silent places alone with the stars. The little camp fire and the man's face was tanned brick red like he had faced the hot desert wind like travelers we see who journey along the road from Imperial.

It is like to travel far away from the roads into places other people seldom go and expect to start about October 1st, and will tell the readers of the Gazette of what we see and do. One afternoon we left the car booth on the gasoline launch that makes regular trips up and down the bay, it is sort of a water street car and stops at several places to change passengers either on or off, we snorted away among warships, and ships of all kinds. There was an old man who was the guide, he had a red nose and a fog horn voice, also more gold braids than the captain of an ocean liner. He got off jokes that father Noah used on the ark to teach the parrots.

We stopped one-half hour at Fort Rosecrans. Anybody who pictures a fort with grim stone walls and cannons peering out of many port holes will be mistaken in this case, for the big guns were setting in a cellar down near the water, one of them was standing up and waiting for a few Mexican warships to try and capture San Diego. The others were sitting back on their haunches taking a snooze in the sun; there were soldiers playing baseball, others playing hand ball, some reading and others doing stunts in the gymnasium.

It is a pretty spot out there on Point Loma for everything is so well kept and clean as a new pin.

I think in case of war that the warships of the enemy would have a real lively time getting into San Diego bay by all those guns, mines, etc., for the entrance to the bay is narrow and there are rapid fire guns, also big searchlights and everything up-to-date to make the enemy earn his money.

Now days we can not say we steamed along as will have to say we gassed along to the ocean sea birds were flying about, now and then a pelican would dive into the water, they made a splash like a bale of hay, they went under for a second then up with a fish which they slipped into the air and caught in their chin.

There was a piece of canvas stretched along one side of the boat and I was green enough to think it was a profection from the sun but as soon as we struck the heave of the Pacific, found where it was useful right away for the bow of the launch would cut through a big wave then go down to the next one and throw a spray of water as over the canvas. It was certainly fine; the ocean was smooth, only those big, smooth, blue rollers or swells, they were like glass and came in even as clock ticks. We went plumped into them and had the good luck to meet three submarines, the mother ship the "Alert" and three torpedo boats. We could see the periscope and were ahead any nobody noticed them until fog horns whispered about them. They looked like three big fish, only fish don't carry men on their back or spurt steam out behind. There was not much of them showed above water but they traveled at good speed and were soon out of sight. The Alert came next and was a fair sized ship. The waves were just large enough to make her nod slightly as she steamed slowly along, she made me think of an old lady driving three ducks along and nodding her head as she walked.

We could see the torpedo boats coming down from the north. There were a long distance out to sea and coming like an express train, they soon turned inland and all we could see then was three funnels of the white funnels and funnels. They turned slightly just before they met our launch and cut through the waves so close to us that we had a splendid view of them. They were sure built, fast and powerful, but turned a large white and blue wave up on each side that made the launch dance the bango.

Also, around the bell buoy and turned back. It was a fine trip and we were lucky it was a perfect day. We could see the Coronado Islands thirty miles out over the sea, and the clear California landscape was like a large picture.

As we went in by the fort I noticed that close as we were, could not see a thing to tell there was a row of beach large guns hidden there on the beach, could not see a gun, but knew where it was or could not have seen it as it was colored just the same as the hill behind the fort.

We did not have the camera then could not take a picture of the gun but we have one will be able to take pictures wherever we go, either in the mountains or on the ocean.

DEMOCRATS ARE AT SIXES AND SEVENS

LITTLE HOPE OF HARMONY AT GATHERINGS TO BE HELD TODAY.

TWO TICKETS PROBABLE

Aylward May Head One and Karel the Other—Husting and Kearney for Senator.

(By Bob Acres.)

N. B.—This is one of a series of articles written on Wisconsin politics exclusively for the Gazette.

Milwaukee, July 14.—There was no more chance of harmony in the democratic ranks after an all day conference by the various faction leaders Monday morning. It is the feeling that the factions will give in on their fight to home rule over Ireland. A blind man could see that and a man would have to be deaf, dumb and blind not to realize that the factions of the democratic leaders scheduled for today, is simply going to make the division between the factions more pronounced than ever.

The Plankinton hotel and the Republican House were the two most animated places in Milwaukee, although one could hear politics talked in almost every place where politicians gathered. With Karel's headquarters and Aylward's headquarters at the Plankinton and Hustung at the Republican, there was a steady stream of visitors wending their way between the two. In the midst of the procession could be found national committee men, Joseph E. Davies of the Davies-Aylward faction, the Wilson-Bryan dove of peace, trying hard to find some place to light with safety.

It was amusing to the outsider who watched the hurried calls for this conference or that, but from what I can learn I think it is safe to say that there will be two tickets nominated. We could see that the factions, the unexpected happens and the Karel leaders agree to withdrawing their candidate if Aylward and Davies step out and a third man and a new candidate for the senate is chosen. This is impossible so should not be seriously considered.

One ticket will be headed by Karel for governor and Kearney for senator and the other by Aylward for governor and Hustung for senator. The Karel's captains announce he will not withdraw, that his organization throughout the state is stronger than Aylward's, and he deserves the nomination. We could see that the Karel's guess was, but what for results. We could see that the Karel's guess was, but what for results.

Electricity From the Skies.

Very little more is known of atmospheric electricity than Franklin discovered in Philadelphia in June, 1752, when he proved that the electricity of the air and the electricity of the laboratory are one and the same. Various devices have been made for measuring the force of the current in the hope that it would assist in forecasting the weather, but the magnetic envelope that apparently surrounds the globe and wraps it with a network of currents is still a baffling mystery.

The report, therefore, from Madrid that a Spanish physicist has succeeded in reaching out into the air with special apparatus and bringing back electricity enough to light fifteen lamps and keep them lighted during a prolonged test, is of the highest importance if true.

While all this is going on in the two hotels I find that grand preparations are being made for the gathering of the faithful at the West Side Turner hall. Here it is expected that fully a thousand delegates representing every county in the state will meet to endorse Karel. Dave Rose has this in charge and he insists it will be a gathering of democrats such as has not been seen in the state for any years. Rose by the way it is said is going to be a factor in the Karel campaign.

That Aylward and Hustung will not attend this gathering and that they will have a convention of their own is talked of freely. Rose invited Davies as national committeeman and personal representative of President Wilson to attend the west side gathering. But whether he will show up or not is speculation. Joe is terribly worried and does not know what sort of a report to send back to Washington. He was sent out here to pacify the two warring factions and his work thus far has been similar in effect to pouring oil on a burning building. The West Side convention is to be called to order by Calvin Stewart of Kenosha who is a candidate for congress in the first district. That was the plan early this morning. This gives Stewart a chance to exploit himself and put in a good lick for Karel and Kearney.

Jim J. Connor, everyone knows Jim, former attorney general under Peck, will be named as permanent chairman and matters will be run along by typewritten instructions without a hitch it is expected.

That Aylward will not be present and that Hustung will not be present and that the Wilson state federal appointments in the state who have been summoned to Milwaukee for emergency duty will also be absent for this convention is certain now. There is going to be no chance for a slip up in any of the plans that will rush through the nomination of Karel and Kearney if it can be helped.

While all this is going on I wandered over to the conservative republican headquarters and found lots of activity there. There is going to be a meeting of the leaders of this faction of republicans today that is called for the purpose of filling the vacancies in the ticket caused by the resignation of W. M. Bray of Oshkosh for Lieutenant Governor. Right here I might say Bray was rather peeved at I might say that he was not chosen for the gubernatorial nomination and that I think that has as much to do with his withdrawal from the ticket as anything. Kreutzer was not even consulted when nominated.

However the conservatives are preparing for an all summer campaign along the old lines and mean to make things hum if they can. They will make matters interesting for the rest of the republicans before the primaries. Secretary Fraser is handling affairs here and it is expected that John M. Whitehead will have considerable to say about the management of the campaign. I am informed there is talk that Judge Bancroft may also drop out of the race for the senatorship in view of the fact that congressman Cooper of Racine is talking of becoming a candidate. If this is true Cooper will make things interesting for the other republican candidates without being officially backed by any faction.

McGovern has opened his headquarters for the campaign in Milwaukee and is ready for business. He is the first republican senatorial candidate to do so and means to catch the voters' eye and going if possible to the top. It is going to break into the line light by a speech at Waukesha so things are not sleeping in republican ranks just at present.

WHITE VS. YOAKUM AT DENVER TONIGHT

White, Master of Willie Ritchie, Clashes With Yoakum Twenty Rounds at Denver.

Denver, July 14.—Can Stanley Yoakum make a clean sweep of the White family of boxers? This was the question local fight fans were asking today in anticipation of tonight's battle between the local light-weight and Charlie White of Chicago, who recently lowered Willie Ritchie's colors in a no-decision bout in Milwaukee.

Last March Yoakum knocked out Jack White, Charlie's brother, in the tenth round of a scheduled 15 round affair. Tonight's battle with Charlie is scheduled to go 20 rounds, the longest distance of any fight staged in Colorado since the new boxing law went into effect. Yoakum is a fighter of the fat Nelson school who bates in all the time and is willing to accept punishment for a chance to land a punch. White is a clever boxer.

TRAINING SCHOOL GIRLS PLAYED FIRST BALL GAME: WEBSTER PLAY GROUNDS

In the first game of the newly organized girls' baseball league of the Rock County Teacher's Training school the Janesville team was defeated by the Edgerton team by the one sided score of 11 to 4. The girls enjoyed the game throughout and although it would probably be a hard matter to count the errors yet it was only the first trial and better playing can be expected as the season progresses. This afternoon the team composed of the country girls will play with the Edgerton team at the Webster school grounds while the Beloit and Evansville teams are to clash at the Washington school grounds.

AMUSEMENTS

THE APOLLO.
There are thousands in Janesville who have never seen the inside of our factories or witnessed the manufacture of any of the products. This will be one of the most interesting parts of the Janesville in moving pictures which will be shown at the Apollo Theatre today and tomorrow. The principal features were exhibited by the camera man, and there will be spread on the screen a moving picture of an article made from raw materials.

The parade pictures will create a lot of interest, for not only did the movie man catch all of the parade but he caught the crowd lining the streets. The public will be anxious to see how he or she looks as a movie star.

There are all sorts of theories as to the origin of the merry anniversary, but the most plausible is the one which gives the custom its use in France, about 1564. France was the first European country to adopt the reformed calendar, and as a result the New Year day was carried back to January 1, and mock calls were made on April 1, as a joke on such as had forgotten the change in the calendar.

Robert Christian has resigned his position with the Creamery Supply Co. and will go to the manufacturing plant in Janesville. He will go with his company of the Beloit Guards to Camp Douglas for ten days next Saturday. Mrs. Christian will visit her parents at Sturgeon Bay in the meantime.

The total $2,000 would have been raised but the attendance, on account of the intense heat and threatening weather, kept a great many away. The balance of the amount needed will be raised very easily as soon as the committee begins its personal soliciting.

A gasoline stove in P. H. Garvin's apartments sprang a leak and caught on yesterday morning. Mrs. Garvin called for help and the stove was pitched out of the window, no harm being done except for smoke. The real excitement came after the stove was safely on the sidewalk, when a man, who tried to give his name, attempted to kick the stove off the sidewalk. The gasoline splashed all over his trousers and in a flash he was a mass of flames from his hips down. Marshall Conley and several onlookers had a hard time extinguishing the flames and luckily the fellow did not receive any very painful burns.

HE used to switch tobacco every few weeks. Then a friend gave him a small chew of "Right-Cut." Steady user now. Says it's the Real Tobacco Chew.

Quite the regular thing with "Right-Cut" users. A man is glad he found it—and just naturally passes the good word along. Pure, sappy, full-bodied tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

INSANITY COSTS MILLIONS; ALIENISTS URGE PREVENTION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Ill., July 14.—The waste of the system by which states spend as high as forty per cent of the total state budget in the care of dependents, chiefly insane, while almost nothing is done to prevent mental diseases, will be discussed by the medical, scientific and sociological experts attending the third annual convention of the alienists of the United States, which opened at the Hotel La Salle here today.

"More than $12,000,000 a year is spent in Illinois alone in the maintenance of eleemosynary institutions," said Secretary A. L. Bowen of the Illinois commission. The annual appropriation for the Illinois State Psychopathic Institute, established in 1907, is $17,000, and only two men are employed in its research work.

Dr. Bayard Holmes, authority on dementia praecox, declared that there were more than 120,000 sufferers from this form of insanity alone in the United States and that more than $50,000,000 was spent annually in the care of its victims.

"Yet the states make no effort, spend no money and encourage no research for discovering the cause of this grave malady," she declared, "and nothing for finding some way of prevention."

LATE PEA CROP IS BLIGHT STRICKEN

Cool Weather Has Held Crop In Check—Loss Will Be Exceedingly Heavy.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 14.—"From one-half to two-thirds of the late pea crop will be lost through the ravages of blight," said R. E. Vaughan, assistant in plant pathology at the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, upon his return from an inspection trip through the pea growing sections of the state.

Due to the cool weather which held the disease in check, the blight made little headway against the early peas and a splendid pack was put up, but with the coming of the hot weather the trouble is developing rapidly and playing havoc with the late peas. Some fields in the infested districts are so full of the blight that they look as black as they would if burned over.

Now that the blight is so firmly established, Mr. Vaughan believes that there is little the growers can do except follow preventive measures that may lead to better crops next year. It is quite possible that for a few years, or until the hoped-for resistant variety can be developed, the growers will have to raise early peas almost entirely, for these mature during the cool days of June when the blight is not so severe. At present about all that can be done is to get the vines out of the way as early as possible and practice the rotation of crops. Care should be taken to select clean seed, and peas ought not to be grown on the same ground more than once in four years.

"The disease seems to have gotten a stronger hold on crops on light, sandy soils than on the heavy clay soil crops," stated Mr. Vaughan, "and it is prevalent in varying degrees of intensity from Ashland on the north to Dane and Rock counties in the south."

At present Mr. Vaughan is conducting a series of experiments at the station farm with a view to originating a variety of late peas that will prove blight resistant, and has so far met with encouraging results. It will, however, be some time until enough of the seed from resistant plants can be obtained to be of material importance to growers who are suffering from the ravages of the blight.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

TIME AND THE ROSES.

"The old order changeth, yielding place to new
And God fulfills himself in many ways
Most strange good custom should corrupt the world."

—Tennyson.

A FRIEND of mine told me this story. She was putting some flowers on her little son's grave. He has been dead but a few months. It was the first real grief of her life. The old gardener of the burying ground was raking the leaves nearby and watching her in a kindly way. He thought he must have seen her face working as she bent over the flowers, for by and by he came nearer to her and leaning on his rake said something about the weather. Soon they were talking in friendly fashion, and before she knew it the mother was relieving her overburdened heart by telling the old gardener about her grief.

He listened in the kindly wisdom and patience that years of dwelling in the city of the dead seemed to have brought him. And by and by, after the first torrent of said and tender memories had spent itself, he tried to make her realize that time will heal the deepest wound and that this first sorrow would not darken her whole life.

Of course she could not believe that. She saw ahead only a long vista of grieving. Others might forget but their sorrow was not so great as hers. And then the gardener told her his story. "In one year," he said, "I lost my money, my wife and my two children. One blow after another upon me and when my last child, my baby, died I wanted to go too. If it hadn't been for friends who would not let me I should have followed. That was twenty-two years ago. Have I forgotten? No, but I do not sorrow again. I am happy. Yes, I think I am. Not as I was, but I am happy again some day, is possible.

But to believe it with one's heart is impossible. And yet it does some good to lay hold of that thought and keep it in one's mind. It does some good to realize that people who have been through as great grief as yours—and there are many—have come back again into the sunshine and found that life still holds some happiness for them.

He never has had a home for us. We never hear from him, so I have given him up.

Now, I have met a nice young man. He insists on helping me, but I do not approve of it, and refuse his help.

Isn't it wrong for a man to help a girl of my age?

Would it go against me if I should get a divorce? Could my husband ever take my girls away from me by the law?

You do quite right to refuse help without expecting full value in return, and when the woman feels unobliged to him she is apt to do things that are wrong.

You can get a divorce from your husband for non-support, I should think. As long as he has deserted you, it would be best to be free from him. I do not think the law would give the little girls to their father if you can show that he has never provided for them and has willfully left them for you to support.

HOW TO MAKE A FIRELESS COOKER

"Boiled Dinner"—Cook a piece of corned beef and a piece of salt pork in the cooker overnight. In the morning prepare all the vegetables in it. The greater the variety the better the dinner. Boil ten or fifteen minutes and return to the cooker. It is best to leave potatoes until an hour and a quarter before serving, as they are the only vegetables likely to suffer from too long a time in the cooker. When they are added bring the contents of the kettle to the boiling point again. The liquid from the boiled dinner makes a good soup if the corned beef and salt pork have been parboiled to remove some of the salt.

Boston Beans and Other Dried Vegetables.—In cooking dry beans, the time required either in the oven or the cooking box will vary with the length of time the beans have been kept; the older the beans the more cooking required. Soak one quart of beans overnight; in the morning drain them and cover with cold water and heat to boiling. Let boil until the skins will burst when touched very lightly, adding one-fourth teaspoon of soda a few minutes before taking from the fire. Drain through a colander. Return to the kettle and add one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, three tablespoonfuls molasses, and one-half pound of salt pork, washed and scraped, and cover with boiling water. Let boil 20 or 30 minutes, then place in the cooking box. If the beans are new, six hours in the box will be long enough. Old beans require longer cooking and should be left in the box overnight, then reheated in the morning, and returned to the box. They will be ready to serve for the midday meal.

Dried Vegetables, such as peas, beans, lima beans, lentils or corn may be soaked in cold water several hours, and then after the preliminary boiling of a few minutes kept from six to twelve hours in the cooker. They may be cooked with salt pork, and thus prepared they are liked by many, or they may be cooked with vegetable oil, or olive oil, or they may be cooked plain and seasoned with salt, pepper, and butter or cream. The longer, then, dry vegetables are cooked in the box the more palatable and the more digestible they will be.

DESSERT RECIPES FOR MIDSUMMER.
These tested desserts, delicious and simple, with the added virtue of coolness, are suggested for the midsummer days by Miss Cora E. Binzel, instructor in home economics, University of Wisconsin Extension Division.

Watermelon Cups.—Remove the rind and cut the melon into cubes; sprinkle with sugar and lemon juice; chill before serving.

Apple Marshmallows.—1 cup pared apples, 1/2 cup blanched almonds, 1 cup marshmallows cut in quarters, 2 cups whipped cream. Combine and chill.

Mousse.—1 cup heavy cream, 1 salt spoon salt, 1/2 cup powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat the cream, add the sugar, salt and vanilla. Turn the mixture in a tin mould, adjust cover and seal with strips of cheese cloth dipped in melted lard or butter, or seal with melted paraffine. This is to prevent salt water from entering the can. Pack the mold in salt and ice, using two parts ice to one part water. Allow two hours or more for the freezing. This is a delicious, wholesome dessert, very easily prepared and does not require an ice cream freezer. For variety flavor the cream with orange or melted chocolate. During the winter the mould may be packed in a mixture of snow and salt. Baking powder or cocoa cans may be used for molds. Fill with water and test to see that they do not leak.

Cat of Ancient Mexico.
The Mexican himself firmly believes in the nine stages of heaven and hell, and the curious cat of the Aztecs began existence with its full quota of nine lives. This feline of ancient Mexico today almost extinct, was a peculiar, even repulsive creature, being absolutely naked, save for the few sparse hairs which appeared along the ridge of its tail and back at the beginning of winter.

Harmful Insects.
From a composition on "Harmful Insects" a teacher gleaned the following information: "The chief insects harmful to man is the fly, mosquito and caterpillar. To destroy them get them all and step on them or otherwise destroy their breathing places."

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

Today's Talk space is given over to the mother who writes to ask for that space for suggestions on the proper care and feeding of the babies. She goes on to say: one of the most important things to remember in feeding a baby is to keep in mind that we are dealing not with a person with a finished organism. A healthy baby's digestive apparatus is in process of development and if given a fair chance will not fail to perfect itself. We can aid by our care, or we can injure by our carelessness and ignorance.

Two things to be avoided is over-feeding, and the baby's irregular eating, and feeding so irregularly that the consequences will be serious. A baby should be fed strictly on time, no matter how much it may inconvenience the mother. The baby who is fed should have this rule adhered to even more strictly than the nursing baby, as its chances for life and health are smaller. If a baby frets directly after feeding it generally shows that its quantity of nourishment is not right—it has had too much or too little. A mother will soon learn from experience when to blame the baby. There is never be trouble about raising a baby of only a wee bit of system is put in to practice. There is nothing in this world that is worth doing that is not some trouble—but when it comes to calling a baby trouble, why a baby is always worth while—gloriously worth while.

A baby's bottle should be held or paced at such an angle as to keep the neck of the bottle entirely filled with milk, to prevent the air in the empty portion of the bottle from being sucked into the baby's stomach to produce colic. A child should not be moved about after food is taken; put it in the crib and let it remain undisturbed for an hour if possible, lying on its right side, so as to favor the easy passage of the food into the intestines. However, a baby should be left on the right side more than on the left. When about your work go frequently to the crib to see how your child is faring. Straighten out its clothes, turn it over, and if it is necessary to say to keep a baby out of the direct glare of strong sunlight.

Did you ever stop a minute and put yourself in the baby's place? In some homes a baby is a lucky individual while in others—well it keeps one guessing when you enter a home where a baby is lacking. Homes where a baby would be given such a splendid body built in loving kindness as God intended the wee little things to have. Then, you enter a home where the poor, little helpless mite is given what you might term a "left-hand raising."

A bottle baby is harder to raise, if you are not particular about the bottles and everything pertaining to its feeding. Cleanliness is a positive necessity, or sick, puny babies are the results. One cannot be too careful in this matter. A baby is very much like a little plant. If you take a plant and put it in the shade, care for it but let it starve, it will die. The same results. But if you take that same plant, give it plenty of God's free fresh air and sunshine, tend it carefully, there is still a difference. A baby is born with a reward for your time and care. A baby well raised has infinite possibilities. Are you raising your baby well?

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.
Cucumber rind cut into thin strips and put where ants abound will invariably drive them away.

If after scrubbing out the cupboard it is then sprinkled with water in which tobacco has been steeped, and then with a little spirits of camphor, moths will never appear.

When cooking fruit test if sufficiently done with a knitting needle instead of a fork. The needle will not break or make holes in the fruit as the fork would.

To remove tannin stains from tea cups or any other porcelain ware a paste of soda and salt and a little acetic acid should be used. The mixture should be applied with a cloth, and after the stain is bleached out the cups should be washed and dried.

THE TABLE.
Soft Shelled Crabs.—Clean the crabs, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in crumbs, egg, and crumbs; fry in deep fat and drain. The shells will rise to top of the fat and should be turned while frying. Soft shelled crabs are usually fried. Serve with tartar sauce. To Clean a Crab: Lift and fold back the tapering points where are found the salt glands and the back shell and remove the spongy substance that lies under them. Turn the crab on its back and with a pointed knife remove the small piece at the bottom part of the shell which contains in a point; this is called the apron.

Salmon Box.—Line a bread pan, slightly buttered, with warm steam ed rice. Fill the center with cold boiled salmon, flaked, and seasoned with salt, pepper and a slight grating of nutmeg. Cover with rice and steam one hour. Turn out on a hot platter for serving and pour around egg sauce. Egg Sauce: One-third cup of butter, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one and one-half cups of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-half cup of milk, one-half the butter, add the flour with the seasonings and pour on gradually the hot water. Boil five minutes and add the remaining butter in small pieces, the yolks of the eggs beaten and one teaspoonful of lemon juice.

Corn à la Southern.—To one can of chopped corn add two eggs slightly beaten, one teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of melted butter and one pint of scalded milk; turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a slow oven until firm.

Boiled Cucumbers.—Old cucumbers may be pared, cut in pieces, cooked until soft in boiling salted water, drained, mashed and seasoned with salt, nutmeg and pepper.

Fried Potato Balls.—To one cup of rice potatoes add one tablespoonful of butter, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of celery salt, and one-half teaspoonful of egg and one-half teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley. Shape in small balls, roll in flour, fry in deep fat and drain.

away from the temptation to use tobacco. It won't do much good simply to command him not to use it, if he associates with those who do use it. Mere commands are for the most part useless. But if parents in any neighborhood would get together and devise practical ways of keeping their boys occupied and away from temptation, they would accomplish vastly more than to threaten boys if they smoke, or to give them formal instruction in regard to the evil effects of smoking. Properly supervised public playgrounds in cities are accomplishing a good deal in this direction. The danger is often greatest in small towns, where there is nothing for boys to do but to loaf around the saloon, the railroad station, the livery stable, and the barber shop.

There is another very prominent cause of dullness in boys and girls—tea and coffee drinking. Investigations have been made in some of our cities, and it has been found that when children below the age of seven or eight drink tea or coffee, their effects are more or less disastrous upon the action of the minds. Nature never intended that a child should use any kind of artificial stimulant; and tea and coffee are very active stimulants for most persons, and for practically all children. Keep tea and coffee away from your children if you want them to develop mentally in the proper way. There is no excuse whatever for children indulging in tea or coffee. (Next week Prof. H. L. Miller will write about "Our High Schools.")—Ed.)

It has been found, too, that a considerable proportion of pupils are dull because they have defective hearing. This may be due to accumulations in the external ear, or it may be due to the fact that the eustachian tube is practically certain that any child whose head is "stuffed up" cannot hear with distinctness, and it would be a safe bet that 95 out of 100 such children will be more or less dull, unresponsive and inattentive. Such children will be handicapped in this competition with other children who are normal in this respect. Any parents or teachers who have a dull child on their hands ought certainly to make a test of the acuity of his hearing. Sometimes peculiar facial and bodily habits are due to inability to hear clearly in one ear, while the other may be normal. In such a case the child may unconsciously catch his head in such a way as to put his good ear into line with the voice or sound he wishes to hear. When any such idiosyncrasy is observed, the parents or the teacher ought not to delay in making a hearing test. It would be best, of course, if such a child could be taken to a competent physician who would examine his ears thoroughly, and also his nasal condition, and who would test keenness of hearing by a test of the school by putting the child in a quiet room, blindfolding him, and noting at what distance he can hear the ticking of a watch, first with one ear and then with the other. The position of the watch must be varied without the experimenter walking back and forth so that the child can hear him, or else the latter will be influenced by suggestion.

One of the important causes of dullness is the grow of superfluous tissue in the lower part of the breathing passages, a sort of third tonsil, known as adenoid tissue. A child who is afflicted with adenoids always shows it in his features. The mouth usually hangs open. There is an absence of expression in the face. At night the child struggles for breath, and never has a quiet rest. Not once in a hundred cases will such a child be thoroughly bright and capable mentally. The only remedy is to have the adenoids removed by a competent physician. In some cities today, every child is examined for adenoids, and for enlarged tonsils, both of which interfere with perfect respiration, and so produce a low tone in mind and body. This trouble is very common among American children. In some families every and enlarged tonsils; and unless these be removed, there will be dullness and even stupidity in every member of such a family.

Again extensive investigations have shown that cigarette smoking among boys is a very frequent cause of dullness. In a number of places, it has been shown that something like 90 per cent of the boys who cannot do their school work are addicted to cigarette smoking. In a healthy thing, smoking anywhere from twelve to twenty years of age to get into the habit of using tobacco in any form, it acts as a narcotic which depresses mind and body. A wise parent will do everything he can to keep his boy

What To Do With Our Dull Children

By Prof. M. V. O'Shea, Department of Education, University of Wisconsin, Article No. 2.

It has been found, too, that a considerable proportion of pupils are dull because they have defective hearing. This may be due to accumulations in the external ear, or it may be due to the fact that the eustachian tube is practically certain that any child whose head is "stuffed up" cannot hear with distinctness, and it would be a safe bet that 95 out of 100 such children will be more or less dull, unresponsive and inattentive. Such children will be handicapped in this competition with other children who are normal in this respect. Any parents or teachers who have a dull child on their hands ought certainly to make a test of the acuity of his hearing. Sometimes peculiar facial and bodily habits are due to inability to hear clearly in one ear, while the other may be normal. In such a case the child may unconsciously catch his head in such a way as to put his good ear into line with the voice or sound he wishes to hear. When any such idiosyncrasy is observed, the parents or the teacher ought not to delay in making a hearing test. It would be best, of course, if such a child could be taken to a competent physician who would examine his ears thoroughly, and also his nasal condition, and who would test keenness of hearing by a test of the school by putting the child in a quiet room, blindfolding him, and noting at what distance he can hear the ticking of a watch, first with one ear and then with the other. The position of the watch must be varied without the experimenter walking back and forth so that the child can hear him, or else the latter will be influenced by suggestion.

One of the important causes of dullness is the grow of superfluous tissue in the lower part of the breathing passages, a sort of third tonsil, known as adenoid tissue. A child who is afflicted with adenoids always shows it in his features. The mouth usually hangs open. There is an absence of expression in the face. At night the child struggles for breath, and never has a quiet rest. Not once in a hundred cases will such a child be thoroughly bright and capable mentally. The only remedy is to have the adenoids removed by a competent physician. In some cities today, every child is examined for adenoids, and for enlarged tonsils, both of which interfere with perfect respiration, and so produce a low tone in mind and body. This trouble is very common among American children. In some families every and enlarged tonsils; and unless these be removed, there will be dullness and even stupidity in every member of such a family.

Again extensive investigations have shown that cigarette smoking among boys is a very frequent cause of dullness. In a number of places, it has been shown that something like 90 per cent of the boys who cannot do their school work are addicted to cigarette smoking. In a healthy thing, smoking anywhere from twelve to twenty years of age to get into the habit of using tobacco in any form, it acts as a narcotic which depresses mind and body. A wise parent will do everything he can to keep his boy away from the temptation to use tobacco. It won't do much good simply to command him not to use it, if he associates with those who do use it. Mere commands are for the most part useless. But if parents in any neighborhood would get together and devise practical ways of keeping their boys occupied and away from temptation, they would accomplish vastly more than to threaten boys if they smoke, or to give them formal instruction in regard to the evil effects of smoking. Properly supervised public playgrounds in cities are accomplishing a good deal in this direction. The danger is often greatest in small towns, where there is nothing for boys to do but to loaf around the saloon, the railroad station, the livery stable, and the barber shop.

There is another very prominent cause of dullness in boys and girls—tea and coffee drinking. Investigations have been made in some of our cities, and it has been found that when children below the age of seven or eight drink tea or coffee, their effects are more or less disastrous upon the action of the minds. Nature never intended that a child should use any kind of artificial stimulant; and tea and coffee are very active stimulants for most persons, and for practically all children. Keep tea and coffee away from your children if you want them to develop mentally in the proper way. There is no excuse whatever for children indulging in tea or coffee. (Next week Prof. H. L. Miller will write about "Our High Schools.")—Ed.)

Peggy & Company

XVIII. Wherein Peggy Bids Dull Household Cares Begone and Spends the Morning at Tennis.

"Dear Peggy," wrote Mother: "Father and Tom have been telling me in their letters how well you have taken hold of things and you must know that such news is a great pleasure to me. I am very proud that my little daughter is able to be such a help. I like to think that you are not prompted to do your best wholly through a sense of duty, but rather because you have discovered a liking for and an interest in household activities."

"Moreover," thought mother, though she didn't write it, "I hope upon my return home that it will not cease abruptly."

"I am happy to think that your little visit in the country has had such good effect. I remember your writing that you would be able to take and let me have a nice long rest and you have shown yourself so capable and so willing that I have made the best of it. With love,

"MOTHER."

Upon finishing the letter Peggy's fresh and blooming young face failed somehow to gladden and radiate with gentle pleasure. Rather she was fretted and depressed. She felt that father and Tom in writing such effusive accounts of her to mother were going too far. In reviewing her brief career as a domestic functionary she felt none of that warmth of gratification that attends the knowledge of a deed well done. In short, her spirits languished and she was tormented by many distracting doubts and speculations. The prospect of many days of drudgery to follow did not ease appreciably the burden of her thoughts.

Thus reflecting, Peggy hid suddenly upon a refreshing idea. She would completely forget it all and spend the morning at tennis. Tom, as she passed him on the porch, expressed surprise at this sudden desertion.

"Don't forget to return," and prepare luncheon, little dear," he called after her in a teasing tone. "I shall be quite hungry by noon."

"Have a look in the ice box," from Peggy; "we have some milk and you might enjoy a sardine sandwich. If you don't see what you want, ask for it."

"If mother doesn't return soon," thought Tom, "this family will resemble Cassius, with its lean and hungry look." Fortunately, however, he felt somewhat the same way about it and decided to come home at once and resume the management of things. Peggy would make better progress with some one at hand to advise.

ECZEMA ON CHILD ITCHED AND BURNED

In Rash First. Could Not Sleep or Rest. Hard Crust Covered Neck. Awful Disfigurement. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

E. F. D. No. 4, Box 55, Holland, Mich.—"My child's trouble began by getting red and sore around her neck, and her face, behind her ears, under her arms, and different parts of her body were affected. The eczema appeared in a rash first. It was wet and looked as if it was weeping. It seemed to itch and burn so that she could not sleep or rest. It got so bad at last that behind her ears was one crust or sore so that I had to cut her hair. There was a hard crust covering her neck. She could not have her clothes fastened at all. I could hardly change her clothes. It caused an awful disfigurement for the time. She would cry when I had to wash her."

"We had her treated for some time but without success. The trouble had lasted about four weeks when we began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had not used them more than three days when I could see she was getting better. I put one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and I had not used more than half of what I bought when she was all cured." (Signed) Mrs. G. C. Rittersma, Nov. 21, 1914.

Poetry and Youth.
If poets sing to the young, and the young hail their own inter-laters in poets, it is because the tendency of both is to idealize the realities of life, finding everywhere in the real a something that is noble and fair, and making the fair yet fairer and the noble nobler still.—Bayer.

LATE STORMS HAVE AFFECTED GROWING CROPS BUT LITTLE

MacKenzie Submits Report of Condition of Crops Following Severe Rains Recently.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., July 14.—There has been little damage to growing crops by the recent heavy rains, according to the July crop report made public today by J. C. MacKenzie, secretary of the state board of agriculture. The damage to wheat for the whole state was 2 of one per cent, rye 1 per cent, barley 1 per cent, oats 1.2 per cent, and tame hay 1.1.

"Estimates of crop conditions as of July 1 are as follows," says the report. "Wheat, northern division, 97.4 per cent; the general average for the state being 96.8 per cent, as compared with 95.4, the general average condition reported June 1. Slight changes are shown in the condition of spring wheat and winter rye. The condition of spring wheat in the northern division is 95.6 per cent, central division 94.3 per cent, southern division 96.1 per cent; the average condition for the whole state being 95.3 per cent, as compared with 94.8 per cent on June 1. The condition of winter rye in the northern division is 95.9 per cent, central division 95.4 per cent, southern division 96.9 per cent, the average condition for the whole state being 95.7 per cent, as compared with 94.8 per cent on June 1. The average condition of spring rye in the northern division is 95.6 per cent, central division 97.1 per cent, southern division 97.1 per cent, the average condition for the whole state being 95.3 per cent, as compared with 94.8 per cent on June 1. The average condition of spring rye in the northern division is 95.6 per cent, central division 97.1 per cent, southern division 97.1 per cent, the average condition for the whole state being 95.3 per cent, as compared with 94.8 per cent on June 1."

"The barley condition shows a slight falling off in the northern division and a slight gain in the central and southern divisions, the general average for the state being 97.8 per cent, as compared with 96.7 per cent on June 1. While the reports show that oats sustained more or less damage from heavy winds, the general average condition in the state is better than reported June 1. It is reported that just is appearing in some localities. The average condition of oats in the northern division is 97 per cent, central division 98.4, southern division 96.9, the general average for the state being 98.8 per cent."

"The average condition of corn in the northern division is 90.9 per cent, central division 95.2 per cent, southern division 97.5 per cent, the general average for the state being 94.6 per cent. Corn on the lowlands has been affected considerably by reason of excessive rain and cold weather following planting. The general average condition of field peas in the state is 93.8 per cent, and that of peas for canning 94.9 per cent. The average condition of potatoes in the northern division is 92, central division 96, southern division 95.8, the average condition for the state being 94.6 per cent, or a gain of three per cent over the year 1912. It is gratifying to know that the chief potato centers of the state show an average condition of 100 per cent."

"Tobacco conditions in the northern division are 92.6 per cent; central 93.1 per cent, southern division 97.9 per cent, the general average for the state being 94.9 per cent. The principal tobacco producing centers of the state, however, show much better than the general average. For example, Dane county shows a condition of 102; Rock county 107, Vernon county 97, Grant county 100, and Columbia county 98. The average condition of sugar beets is 92.2 as compared with 91.4 in 1913. "The general average condition of pastures in the northern division is 104.2 per cent, central division 99, southern division 103.3 per cent, the average condition for the entire state being 102.2 per cent. The general average condition of the cabbage crop in the state is 93.1 per cent, as compared with 91.5 per cent in 1913. The average condition of the apple crop in the northern division is 72.4 per cent, central division 68.8 per cent, southern 59.7 per cent, the average condition for the entire state being 68.3 per cent, as compared with 88.5 per cent in 1913. The general average condition of small fruits in the entire state is 57.7 per cent as compared with 89.4 per cent in 1913."

"The condition of alfalfa in the northern division is 96.2 per cent, central division 97.6 per cent, southern 97.6 per cent, the general average condition for the state being 97.2 per cent, as compared with 92.9 per cent in 1913. The average condition of tame hay in the northern division is 100; central division 100.5, southern division 102.4, the general average for the state being 101, as compared with 91.2 per cent on the same date in 1913. The hay crop that was harvested early was damaged to a considerable extent by excessive rains. The condition of old meadow is not up to the average, the condition of timothy and clover new seedlings was never better. The yield of tame hay in the northern division is 1.7; central division 1.8 tons, southern division 2 tons, the general average for the whole state, or 3 tons greater than the year 1913. The yield per acre for the first cutting of alfalfa in the northern division is 1.5 tons, central division 1.8 tons, southern division 1.9 tons, the general average for the state being 1.8 tons, a gain of .2 of a ton per acre over that of 1913."

"The comparative acreage of buckwheat in the northern division is 32.4 per cent, central division 35.6 per cent, southern division 53.2 per cent, the general average for the state being 44.7 per cent, as compared with 90.3 per cent during the same period in 1912. The average acreage of tobacco in the northern division is 95.6 per cent, central division 99.2 per cent, southern division 99.9 per cent, the average for the whole state being 97.9 per cent, as compared with 96.6 per cent in 1912. The principal tobacco producing centers, however, show the average acreage in Dane county to be 100, Rock county 106, Vernon county 105, Crawford county 100, and Columbia county 85, so that by properly weighing the tobacco acreage of the state it will show a decided increase."

"Very little damage is shown to crops in general by frost, and the total per cent of damage from cutworms for the entire state is 1.1 per cent. Barns, silos, tobacco sheds and windmills were damaged in many sections of the state during the month of June by cyclones and tornadoes. Several localities also report heavy damage to fruit trees and growing timber."

ENJOYED PICNIC AND SUPPER BY LOG FIRE

Twenty-six Members of Lakota Club Held Unique Outing Near Crystal Springs Park Last Evening.

All seated about a highly illuminated log fire with a kettle of hot water above the flames and filled with wieners, to be served hot along with the brick cheese, bread and butter sandwiches, dill pickles, mustard, onions, and pork and beans, twenty-six members of the Lakota club of this city enjoyed a unique midsummer picnic and outing last evening near Crystal Springs park.

The party left the launch club dock about five o'clock, and engaged in singing some of the old minstrel songs on their upward journey. They landed just east of Crystal Springs park on the same side of the river on a huge hill. The members quickly gathered logs and branches for fuel, and by six-thirty o'clock the supper was being served by Caterer Walter P. Airs and Server George Caldwell.

The event was originated by several of the members as being a unique celebration for the club, since their winning first prize in the great wieners contest held two weeks ago. The party broke up at ten o'clock, both launches arriving at the dock at ten-thirty.

Airs, Gus Bauer, John Brown, Carson and Frank Bungeamer, George Caldwell, Walter Carle, Leo Chase, Dwight Church, Howard Clithero, Roger Cunningham, Will Eickmann, J. P. Hammarling, C. O. MOOSE BAND PLAYED AT THE COUNTY FARM
Delightful Concert Was Rendered Last Evening to Inmates.—Rev. Jordon Preached Sunday.

A delightful band concert was rendered last evening to the inmates of the Rock county farm, at the asylum, by the Moose band of this city. The musicians were taken to the institution on George Decker's large truck and an additional automobile at an early hour, after which the players tuned their instruments only to please scores of listeners with their inspiring selections. Supt. Barlass extends a vote of thanks to the musicians for having made the trip for the benefit of those making their homes at the farm.

Mr. Barlass also thanks Rev. Jordon of Milton Junction for having preached Sunday at the farm. The inmates were interested in what he had to say, and were attentive listeners throughout his address.

BARN DANCE HELD ON FRIDAY EVENING
One of the largest barn dances of the season was held at the home of

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Olsen in the town square in the vicinity. Music was furnished by Jack Robertson and Joe Bushin, and about one hundred couples were in attendance. At midnight a delicious supper was served, to which all did ample justice. The merry crowd tipped the light fantastic toe until the wee small hours when they all departed, pronouncing Mr. and Mrs. Olsen and family royal entertainers.

Keeping Young.
One of the most distinguished men in America was asked to write the history of his state. He was more than seventy-five years old. His answer was that he would not care to undertake that work, as he was but little interested in anything that was in the past.—Harper's Weekly.

But Good Thing to Remember.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness."

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.
Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysterical spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

A LODGING FOR THE NIGHT

By Robert Louis Stevenson

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

BOOTH TARKINGTON

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Booth Tarkington, Jack London, Alfred Henry Lewis and Richard Harding Davis was "A Lodging For the Night," by Robert Louis Stevenson.

PART I.

IT was late in November, 1455. The snow fell over Paris with rigorous, relentless persistence. Sometimes the wind made a sally and scattered it in flying vortices; sometimes there was a lull, and fate after fate descended out of the black night air, silent, circuitous, interminable.

The cemetery of St. John had taken its own share of the snow. The clock was hard on 10 when the patro, went by with halberds and a lantern, beating their hands, and they saw nothing suspicious about the cemetery of St. John.

Yet there was a small house, backed up against the cemetery wall, which was still awake, and awake to evil purpose, in that snoring district. There was not much to betray it from without, only a stream of warm vapor from the chimney top, a patch where the snow melted on the roof and a few half obliterated footprints at the door. But within, behind the shuttered windows, Master Francis Villon, the poet, and some of the thievish crew with whom he consorted, were keeping the night alive and passing round the bottle.

A great pile of living-embers diffused a strong and ruddy glow from the arched chimney. Before this straddled Dom Nicolas, the Picaudy monk, with his skirts picked up and his fat legs bared to the comfortable warmth. His face had the beery, bruised appearance of the continual drinker's.

On the right Villon and Guy Tabary were huddled together over a scrap of parchment. Villon making a ballad which he was to call the "Ballad of Mount Fish," and Tabary splintering admiration at his shoulder. The poet was a rag of a man, dark, little and lean, with hollow cheeks and thin, black locks. He carried his four and twenty years with feverish animation. Greed had made folds about his eyes. Evil smiles had puckered his mouth. The wolf and pig struggled together in his face. It was an eloquent, sharp, ugly, earthly countenance. His hands were small and prehensile, with fingers knotted like a cord, and they were continually flickering in front of him in violent and expressive pantomime. As for Tabary, a broad, complacent, admiring imbecility breathed from his squint nose and slobbering lips. He had become a thief just as he might have become the most decent of bourgeois by the imperious chance that rules the lives of humankind and human donkeys.

At the monk's other hand Montigny and Thevenin Pensete played a game of chance. About the first there hung some flavor of good birth and training, as about a fallen angel. Something long, lithe and courtly in the person; something aquiline and dapper in the face. Thevenin, poor soul, was in great feather. He had done a good stroke of knavery that afternoon in the Faubourg St. Jacques, and all night he had been gaining from Montigny.

"Doubles or quits?" said Thevenin. Montigny nodded grimly.

"Some may prefer to dine in state," wrote Villon, "on bread and cheese on silver plate. Or, or—help me out, Guido!"

Tabary giggled.

"Or parsley on a golden dish," scribbled the poet.

The wind was freshening without. It drove the snow before it. The cold was growing sharper.

"You may dance, my gamblers, round be none the warmer. When, what a gust! Down went somebody just now! A medlar the fever on the three-legged medlar tree! I say, Dom Nicolas, it'll be cold tonight on the St. Denis road!" he asked.

Tabary laughed immoderately over the medlars. He had never heard anything more lighthearted, and he held his sides and cowered. Villon fetched him a flip on the nose, which turned his mirth into an attack of coughing.

"Oh, stop that row," said Villon, "and think of rimes to 'fish!' Look at Montigny!"

All three peered covertly at the gamster. He did not seem to be enjoying his luck. His mouth was a little to a side, one nostril nearly shut and the other much inflated. The black dog was on his back, as people say, in terrifying nursery metaphor, and he breathed hard under the grew some burden.

There was a brief and fatal movement among the gamblers. The round was completed, and Thevenin was just opening his mouth to claim another victory when Montigny leaped up swift as an adder and stabbed him to the heart. The blow took effect before he had time to utter a cry, before he convulsed his frame. His hands opened and shut, his heels rattled on the floor, then his head rolled backward over one shoulder, with eyes wide open, and Thevenin Pensete's spirit had returned to him who made it.

Every one sprang to his feet, but the business was over in two twos. "My God!" said Tabary, and he began to pray in Latin.

Villon broke out into hysterical laughter. He came a step forward and ducked a ridiculous bow at Thevenin and laughed still louder. Then he sat down suddenly all of a heap upon a stool and continued laughing bitterly as though he would shake himself to pieces.

Montigny recovered his composure first.

"Let's see what he has about him," he remarked, and he picked the dead man's pockets with a practiced hand and divided the money into four equal portions on the table. "There's for you," he said.

The monk received his share with a deep sigh, and a single stealthy glance at the dead Thevenin, who was beginning to sink into himself and topple sideways off the chair.

"We're all in for it," cried Villon, swallowing his mirth. "It's a hanging job for every man Jack of us that's here—not to speak of those who aren't!"

Then he pocketed his share of the spoil and executed a shuffle with his feet as if to restore the circulation.

Tabary was the last to help himself. He made a dash at the money and retired to the other end of the room.

Montigny stuck Thevenin upright in the chair and drew out the dagger, which was followed by a jet of blood.

"You fellows had better be moving," he said as he wiped the blade on his victim's doublet.

"I think we had," returned Villon, with a gulp. "D—his fat head!" he broke out. "It sticks in my throat like plegm. What right has a man to have red hair when he is dead?" And he fell all of a heap again upon the stool and fairly covered his face with his hands.

occupant unmanned him; and he saw besides as he drew near that their efforts to put out the fire had been unsuccessful. On the contrary, it had broken into a blaze, and a change of light played in the chinks of door and window and revived his terror for the authorities and Paris gibbet.

He returned to the hotel with the snow for the money he had thrown away in his childish passion. But he could find one white; the other had probably struck sideways and sunk deeply in. With a single white in his pocket all his projects for a rousing night in some wild tavern vanished utterly away. And it was not only pleasure that fled laughing from his grasp; positive discomfort, positive pain, attacked him as he stood ruefully before the porch. His perspiration had dried upon him, and although the wind had now fallen a binding frost was setting in stronger with every hour, and he felt benumbed and sick at heart. What was to be done? Late as was the hour, improbable as was success, he would try the house of his adopted father, the chaplain of St. Benoit.

He ran there all the way and knocked timidly. There was no answer. He knocked again and again, taking heart with every stroke, and at last steps were heard approaching from within. A barred wicket fell open in the iron studded door and emitted a gush of yellow light.

"Hold up your face to the wicket," said the chaplain from within.

"It's only me," whispered Villon.

"Oh, it's only you, is it?" returned the chaplain, and he cursed him with foul, unpriestly oaths for disturbing him at such an hour and bade him be off to hell where he came from.

"My hands are blue to the wrist," pleaded Villon; "my feet are dead and full of twigs; my nose aches with the sharp air; the cold lies at my heart. I may be dead before morning. Only this once, father, and before God, I will never ask again!"

"You should have come earlier," said the ecclesiastic coolly. "Young men require a lesson now and then." He shut the wicket and retired deliberately into the interior of the house.

Villon was beside himself. He beat upon the door with his hands and feet and shouted hoarsely after the chaplain.

A door shut in the interior, faintly audible to the poet down long passages. He passed his hand over his mouth with an oath. And then the humor of the situation struck him, and he laughed and looked lightly up to heaven, where the stars seemed to be winking over his discomfiture.

What was to be done? It looked very like a night in the frosty streets. The idea of the dead woman popped into his imagination and gave him a hearty fright; what had happened to her in the early night might very well happen to him before morning.

He passed all his chances under review, turning the white between his thumb and forefinger. Unfortunately he was on bad terms with some old friends who would once have taken pity on him in such a plight. He had lampooned them in verses; he had beaten and cheated them, and yet now, when he was in so close a pinch, he thought there was at least one who might perhaps relent. It was a chance. It was worth trying at least, and he would go and see.

The maiden sighed. "Can you make me beautiful?"

"For five shillings," said the witch. "I can make you so beautiful that all the men will turn to stare at you as you pass."

The maiden smiled disdainfully. Her experience had taught her that this was not such an easy matter.

"For ten shillings," said the witch, "I can make you so beautiful that the photographer will copyright your picture."

Still the maiden, unsatisfied, shook her head.

"For fifteen shillings—and only at that price," said the witch, "I can make you so beautiful that you will not have a woman friend in the world."

"Ah!" cried the maiden rapturously, "that will be beautiful, indeed."

The stonemason was on the witness stand describing the way in which he had been assaulted by the defendant.

"He walked right into my yard," the witness said, "and stamped me up against one of my own tombstones."

"Did he hurt you?" inquired the court.

"Hurt me! Why, I've got 'sacred to the memory of' stamped all down my back."

AND NOW THEY'RE ENGAGED. Miss Hunter—Weren't you surprised when you heard about my horse running away with me?

Mr. Jollier—Not very. I'd do the same thing myself if I got the chance.
